OUR MIDSUMMER CLEARING SALE!

The substantial values we are offering are being thoroughly appreciated by our patrons and the shopping public. Our New Fall and Winter Stock has already begun to arrive. We were forced to make much earlier shipments than usual this year to enable us to secure these goods at old tariff prices, which means a saving of from 25 to 40 per cent. to our patrons. The balance of our summer stock must be closed out quickly to make room for these goods, and in order to make this sale of unusual interest we are going to offer OUR ENTIRE STOCK OF THE CHOICEST FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC FABRICS, ADAPTED TO THE PRESENT SEASON'S WEAR, at prices that are simply unapproachable. For money-saving powers this sale will eclipse any ever attempted in the history of Richmond's merchandising.

RALEIGH, N. C., July 13 .- (Special.)-

The hearing before the Railway Commission yesterday goes on the record as one third, railway property is now assessed at a higher rate than any other property.

To-day the commission resumed the hearing. The officials of the Cape Fear and Yadkin Valley railway, George M.

Rose, Fry, and Kyle, all spoke in opposition to the increase in assessment and rate lowering. They urged, on the other hand, that the board reduce the valuation, which, they claim, is excessive, in view of the struggle this system has made.

The Western Union Telegraph Com-pany, represented by J. B. Tree and ernor Russell will return here to-morrow. He has said that he reserved the right to reply to the statements the railway officials made, if he thought proper. He insisted that all the pleadings be in writing, and that he should have the right to answer any new matter. The chief attack of all the railway people was directed at Associate-Justice Walter Clark, who has for a year or more pas-written and spoken so much against rallways, Speaker-of-the-House A. F. Hillman ar rived to-day to attend the suit brought against him and Lieutenant-Governor Reynolds by A. L. Swinson, who was dis-

Cadet Willie Maclin has returned from Blacksburg to spend his vacation.

Messrs. Neblitt & Slagle, who recently bought the "Walker Mill" property, have made and are making considerable improvements thereto.

I read this morning the Petersburg speprovements thereto.

I read this morning the Petersburg special in your issue of to-day in regard to the recent New York murder. The man referred to in the special, named Edwards, took pictures here a menth or so ago, and left here about the middle of June. He would take the pictures here and send them to the "Murray Gallery Photographing Company," for whom he was working, to have them developed.

stables, or within the marrow limits of a city yard. Anything deleterious in the animal's food often shows itself in the taste and smell of the milk, and if not in these ways, then in the diseases it is almost certain to produce in children fed upon it. Thus we have the reports from city physicians in great towns tracing a large percentage of deaths among young children in particular districts to the milk from dairies where the cows are fed on swill from a distillery. Charleston is particularly favorably situated in this respect, since there is plenty of pasturage for cattle within easy reach of the city, and the milk supplied to her citizens should, therefore, be of the best quality. Then, too, the dairy business being almost entitlely in the hands of respectable people, we have little to fear from uncleanliness in the handling of the milk or from adulteration.

But, while we recognize all this, we cannot help seeing that the dairies of Charleston are far behind those of even small towns in more progressive parts of the country, with regard so the manner of serving milk to their customers. It is an admitted fact that milk rapidly deteriorates after milking, and that it is particularly liable to do so in hot summer weather, and also that it is easily affected by the vessels in which it is kept. Notwithstanding these facts, we still have the city's supply of milk, largely brought into town from the surrounding farms, put into tin vessels that are carried around to the various houses under the rays of a blaxing sun, and from these it is served by dipperfuis into cans or pitchers in the open street, where it is liable to have a considerable quantity of dust and other floating sun, and from these it is served by dipperfuis into cans or pitchers in the open street, where it is liable to have a considerable quantity of dust and other floating sun, and from these it was good enough for our forefathers it ought to suffice for usa form of argument of the near in Charleston when it is proposed to introduce any modern tim disagreeing with them, or without the trouble of sending to a dairy several times a day in order to be sure it was sweet.

The process of sterilizing consists in straining the milk into open-mouthed bottles as soon as it is milked. The bottles are then immersed nearly to the top in water that is gradually brought to about 170 or 180 degrees, but without allowing it to boil, as that renders the milk indigestible. As soon as the milk reaches that temperature, which is sufficient to dearroy all germs or bacilli, the bottles are securely closed, and are allowed to cool before distributing to customers, who in turn can keep them as long as they desire without opening. The separated cream is treated in the same way. The milkman collects the empty vessels as he delivers the new supply. Even those who have only two or three cows could easily contrive to treat the milk in this way without going to the expense of purchasing a regular outift, and the dealers themselves would be largely the gainers, by never finding themselves, even in the hottest weather, with a large quantity of sour and unsalable milk on their hands. The gain in cleanliness from this process is also great, as it comes in contact with only one vessel between the milkpail and being used, and that a gloss one, that can most readily and thereughty be rendered sweet and clean. Since the introduction of sterilized milk into New York there has been a decrease of nearly 50 per cent, in deaths of children from choiera infantum and other diseases caused by hot weather and impure food, and the Roard of Health is urgent in recommending its use. Several years ago Mr. Vanderbilt began supplying Asheville and its vicinity with sterilized milk served in bottles, and since the many of the smaller towns in North Carolina have followed the example with marked benefit. Surely a community that has got a trolley line in full operation will not allow itself to be outdone by its North Carolina neighbors in the matter of pure milk. of pure milk.

"A Long Time Between Drinks,"

(Jacksonville (Fla.) Citizea.) Every man in the United States is supposed to know what the "Governor of North Carolina said to the Governor of South Carolina," but perhaps some do not know when and under what circum-stances the famous remark was made. Nearly a century ago a man pro in political affairs in North Carolina moved across the border and settled in South Carolina. He had been there only a short time when he committed some small crime, for which he was indicted. To escape arrest he returned to his old home in North Carolina. In due course home in North Carolina. In due course of time the Governor of South Carolina issued his requisition on the Governor of North Carolina for the fugitive criminal. The fugitive had rich and influential friends in his native State, and they interceded with the Governor until he refused to grant the requisition. A long official correspondence followed. Prominent men in South Carolina told the Governor that he had not been treated with proper official courtesy by the Governor. proper official courtesy by the Governor of North Carolina. The result was that the South Carolina Governor, accompa-nied by a large party of friends and advisers, journeyed by stage to Raieigh for a conference with the Governor about the matter of giving up the criminal. The Governor of North Carolina, with a large party of distinguished friends, met the Governor of South Carolina and his party several miles from town, and escorted them to the Governor's mansion with all the ceremony due such distinguished visitors. Before the object of his visit was stated, the entire assemblage sat down to an elaborate dinner. After dinner wine was served, and after wine came brandy-the applejack for which the Old

North State is famous.

After many rounds of drinks the decanters and glasses were removed, and the Governor of South Carolina stated the object of his visit. He demanded the the object of his visit. He demanded the surrender of the fugitive criminal. The Governor of North Carolina refused. Then followed a iong and heated discussion, in which the Attorneys-General of the two States took an active part. Finally the Governor of South Carolina refused to the following t grew angry, and, rising to his feet, said:
"Sir, you have refused my instant de-mand and offended the dignity of my office and my State. Unless you at once surrender the prisoner, I will return to my capital, call out the militia of the State, and returning with my army I will take the fugitive by force of arms. Governor, what do you say?"

All eyes were turned on the Governor of North Carolina, and his answer was awaited with breathless interest. The Governor rose slowly to his feet, and beckened to a servant who stood some distance away. His beckoning was firm and dignified, as became his position. He was slow about an woring, and again the Governor of South Carolina de-manded, "What do you say?" "I say, Governor, that it's a long time between drinks."

The reply restored good humor. De-canters and glasses were brought out again, and while the visitors remained, if any one attempted to refer to the diplo-matic object of the visit, he was cut matic object of the visit, he was cut short by the remark that it was a long time between drinks. When the visiting Governor was ready to return home he was escorted to the State line by the Governor of North Carolina, and they parted the best of friends.

The fugitive was never surrendered.
